Dr Nick Lister is the Principal of Lawrence House Astronomy & Space Science Centre, which is situated in the grounds of Rossall School. He is one of the rising stars of UK astronomy and leads the team of staff teaching astronomy to school children and adults at the unique centre, which serves the north of England.

In 1999 Dr Lister joined Rossall School in Lancashire as Astronomer in residence. His first task was to oversee restoration of the school's 'Cooke & Sons' Victorian refracting telescope back to scientific working condition and it is now the only one of its type in operation anywhere in the world. In 2004 he was appointed as head of the Lawrence House Astronomy & Space Science Centre and oversaw its development, through to opening.

Nick Lister is passionate about astronomy. As a councillor for the Association for Astronomy Education (AAE), an organisation devoted to supporting the teaching of astronomy, Nick is equally dedicated to passing this enthusiasm on to all ages and all levels
